Dirt Swept, but Not Carted Away.

To the Editor

The good people of this badly governed city you are making to give us clean streets. And yet the half has not been published. As you truly put it, it's the poor people and their streets that suffer the most. Personally Mr. Beattle is a nice man, but he lacks the brains for the big job of keeping our streets clean, and there is too much politics at his back. What we need is a man of brains and no politics, and until we have that kind of a man we will never have clean streets. The fault will Mr. Beattle and all those before him is that they never take up the dirt after it is seen adopted. It is the fault of all of them.

That plan I have never seen adopted. It is the fault of all of them. They sweep the dirt up, then it's all scattered over the streets again, and so on day after day. I hope for the good of this city you will keep hammering away, for they would not notice an humble taxpayer like myself, but such a paper as yours can accomplish wonders as comes too late.

"DOROTHY'S DILEMMA"

When Miss Coghlan, clad in her regime tals, sees the real Jack Styles, whom she ha been impersonating, she bursts into tears and Fads, Fancies and Fashions That exclaims: " Believe me, I am not a man. I am a cirl. I am a real cirl," and we cannot help feeling a trifle amazed at the suggestion that a woman can thus conceal her sex by the donning of a pair of trousers. This is the keynote of the play entitled "Dorothy's No Other Bootblacks Allowed to Tweeds, Cheviots and Homespuns Dilemma," produced last night at the Park for Autumn Wear-Silk Pettl-Theatre-and fathered in a very impertment way by Leopoid Jordan, who credits
